Feedback Informed Treatment (FIT): Three Steps to Becoming Your Personal Best in Psychotherapy

11 Oct to 8 Nov, 23 Nov 2021

Introduction

Therapists do really want to get better at what they do. Professional development is both a deeply held value and a career long aspiration. It is also central to lifelong job satisfaction. Unfortunately, traditional approaches (e.g. lectures, clinical experience, even supervision) don't really work; it doesn't help therapists get any better in their craft.

Gleaning from studies done on highly effective therapists by International Center for Clinical Excellence (ICCE), this course focuses on helping practitioners develop a personalised system to as much as double the effectiveness of treatment while simultaneously reducing costs, drop-out rates and deterioration.

After participants have completed this course, they will qualify for the sequel course, Beyond Measures in Psychotherapy. More course details can be found at <https://www.sgh.com.sg/pgahi/training-calendar-directory>.

Course Objectives

At the end of the course, participants will be able to:

- Adopt three systematic steps to improving outcomes of their intervention work.
- Identify cases at risk of dropping out of treatment or experiencing a negative or null outcome.
- Identify and improve areas of weakness in their clinical work.

Target Audience

Healthcare Professionals

Course Outline

- Knowing Your Baseline ("So, how effective am I really?")
- Formal, Routine, Ongoing Feedback ("How each of my client is doing?")
- Engaging in Deliberate Practice ("How do I get better?")
